

Inspired to Give

Since its founding in 1964, John Jay College has been providing outstanding educational opportunities to students from all walks of life and from every part of the globe. It is thanks to the commitment and generosity of the College's alumni, friends and supporters that future generations of students are able to continue maximizing the considerable benefits they derive from a John Jay education.

As chairman of the John Jay College Foundation—and a proud donor to the College—I salute each and every one of you for your willingness to lead by example, and for making it possible for John Jay to build on its well-earned international reputation in Educating for Justice.

JULES KROLL

A Grateful Alumna

LaBrenda Garrett-Nelson (B.A. '75) has never lost sight of the impact John Jay College has had on her life. Once an activist student, she is now an active, and grateful, alumna, whose desire to give back to her alma mater led to a major gift to support the John Jay Children's Center. Garrett-Nelson pledged a total of $250,000, which will be used for need-based student scholarships, professional development, equipment purchases and the creation of an emergency fund for students and children. In recognition, a ceremony was held Sept. 29, 2016, to rename the facility the "LaBrenda Garrett-Nelson '75 Children's Center." Garrett-Nelson, a trustee of the John Jay College Foundation, is seen here (2nd from left) with President Travis, her daughter Alexis Garrett Stodghill and her husband, the Rev. Paul Nelson.

Technology Careers Are in the Pipeline

The Carroll and Milton Petrie Foundation has provided a three-year, $300,000 grant to expand the pipeline of community college students to study cybersecurity and subsequently find fulfilling careers in that field. Approximately 1,000 students per year will be served by the program, which will include academic advisement, enhancement programs with participating community colleges, and an innovation palette of career preparation and development activities that are aligned with the needs of industry to ensure work readiness. The project builds on the success of the CUNY Justice Academy and the Cybersecurity Workforce Alliance initiative to provide an innovative success model for technology-focused career readiness.

A Gift that Keeps on Giving

After attending the Educating for Justice Gala in May 2016, Ann Jacobs was inspired to begin making a regular $85-a-month gift to support student scholarships. Jacobs, Director of John Jay’s Prisoner Reentry Institute, saw how these gifts transformed students’ lives, providing them with opportunities they might have only dreamed of. “It is a privilege for me to work at an institution whose historic mission has been to make education accessible to people who might otherwise not have the opportunity to attend college,” said Jacobs. “I contribute to the scholarship fund because I know that education is transformative and I want to invest in people who are investing in themselves.”

Responsible Innovation

On Feb. 8, the College formally launched the new Ron Moelis Social Innovation Fellowship Program, underwritten by a gift from John Jay Foundation trustee Ron Moelis, co-founder and CEO of L+M Development partners. The fellowship program, an initiative aimed at taking advantage of the emerging trend of social responsibility in the business sector, will provide 10 students a year with stipends, structured internship placements and mentoring, focused classroom learning, and other support. On hand to discuss the new program were (l.-r.) the program's director, Professor Heath Brown of the Department of Public Management; Andi Phillips, co-founder and Managing Partner at Maycomb Capital LP; Randolph Brown, Chief Technology Officer at Jopwell, the recruitment and career advancement firm; and Moelis.

A Firm Foundation

The Laura and John Arnold Foundation is proving itself a stalwart partner of John Jay College and its extended mission of Educating for Justice, having recently awarded a three-year, $3.25-million grant to the Research Network on Misdemeanor Justice, which is being used to add six sites to the network to help inform policy discussions and reform regarding trends in the enforcement of lower-level offenses.

Building on the success of the Misdemeanor Justice Project in New York City, the Research Network will now also focus on Los Angeles; Seattle; St. Louis; Toledo, Ohio; Durham, N.C., and Prince George's County, Md.

Matt Alsdorf, the Arnold Foundation's Vice President of Criminal Justice, said: "The network has generated an outpouring of academic and government interest in pioneering a national conversation around enforcement of lower-level crimes—something that leads a large number of individuals to enter our justice system. We are proud of the diverse U.S. cities leading this conversation and we look forward to learning how the research partnerships inform local and national justice policies for the long-term."

The Arnold Foundation has previously supported the Misdemeanor Justice Project in its publication of a series of reports examining trends in the enforcement of low-level offenses in New York City and State, including misdemeanor arrests, criminal summonses, pedestrian stops, and jail admissions.

Ford, Atlantic, and John Jay's First Named Professorship

An infusion of $2.5 million in grants from the Ford Foundation and the Atlantic Philanthropies has enabled John Jay College to establish the Franklin A. Thomas Professorship in Policing Equity, a post that will be held by the celebrated social psychologist Dr. Phillip Atiba Goff, one of the nation's leading scholars on the phenomenon of implicit bias.

The new professorship is named for Franklin A. Thomas, a former president of the Ford Foundation and a pioneering official of the New York City Police Department in the 1960's.

The appointment of Goff, one of the most influential thinkers, scholars, and reformers on topics of policing and race, and the challenges facing policing organizations, also brings to John Jay the Center for Policing Equity, the research and action think tank he co-founded and serves as president. The Center brings together law enforcement agencies and leading researchers to study policing equity issues, including race and implicit bias, and provide a scientific basis for reforms in participating police departments around the country.

The grant from the Ford Foundation and Atlantic Philanthropies will also support the recruitment and mentoring of a cohort of Fellows, including a post-doctoral scholar and five undergraduate students each year, who will work at the Center for Policing Equity and contribute to its research projects. Through the work of these Fellows, the Center aims to influence a new generation of scholarship on policing equity and advance innovative reforms.
