Knowing How to Behave As Vital As Academics

E ven knowing a couple of firefighters, Kevin Hamilton, 3 years old when the World Trade Center fell, had few clues when he entered the Fire Academy in January 2013. He’d managed to bring some of the “sticks and stacks” of non-to-be-required reading about six days before entering the 18-week program in Randall’s Island, but the unfamiliar concepts were tough to untangle without teachers to place them in context.

Just the chapters on building construction required him to see the physical spaces in his city in a new way.

From E-Shape to H-Type

“Row frames, brownstones, H-type buildings…they have E-shaped buildings, too,” Mr. Hamilton, now a Firefighter, explained, listing just a few of the construction types that were once a headache to remember. “Fireproof multiple dwelling, non-fireproof multiple dwelling, wood, metal. You gotta be able to identify the reminder part, he said of the creation of the “scared-stiff” Teacher.

By SARAH DORSEY
Continued on Page A2

For New Firefighters, Training Both Physically and Mentally is a Marathon

F our years ago, shortly before the 10th anniversary of 9/11, John Jay College of Criminal Justice essentially christened its new $600 million, 14-story building on the Upper West Side with a hallowed piece of steel from the World Trade Center.

Mounted on a gleaming pedestal with the inscription, “Dedicated in memory of those from John Jay College community who lost their lives on 9/11, 2001,” it was a memorial to the 67 alumni and members of the college—most of them firefighters—who perished at the Trade Center.

By RICHARD STEIER
“Reminder and a Tribute”

“When we created that memorial, it was meant as a constant reminder to future students,” said John Jay President Jeremy Travis, “and it was a tribute to their bravery and sacrifice.”

The reminder part, he said in a recent interview, is important because at this point “the incoming student—they were 3 years old when the World Trade Center was attacked.”

The ceremony has become an annual event, and Mr. Travis noted, “I can’t say I enjoy doing that bit, but it is an honor to do it.”

When John Jay was founded in 1964, it was known as the College of Police Science, with CUPS as its acronym. By the time classes began the following September, there were complaints among the students that it lacked the pizazz of, say, NYU or UCLA. And so it was renamed in honor of one of the nation’s founding fathers, who in addition to being the first Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court had served as New York’s second Governor.

The college nonetheless continued to be strongly associated with police officers, many of whom had enrolled while already on the job because they were looking to advance their educations and, in the process, their careers. As Mr. Travis described...

Continued on Page A3

Alfred Downstate Programs by CITE and Alfred University

Master’s in School Counseling
Master’s in Counseling & Certificate of Advanced Study in Mental Health Counseling Certificate of Advanced Study in Mental Health Counseling Master’s in Public Administration

$990 per course Financial aid Available Weekend Courses

For more information, call: 1-877-922-CITE (2483) www.alfredteachereducation.com

Educat ng for Justice,’ With Accent on Both

One-Time College-for-Cops’ Stretches Its Legs While Staying True to Roots

By RICHARD STEIER

F or more information, call:

1-877-922-CITE (2483)
www.alfredteachereducation.com

E -shaped buildings, too,” Mr. Hamilton, few clues when he entered the Fire Academy, starting at the college level, moving on to the process of applying for civil-service positions, the training needed for new workers to make the grade once they’ve been hired, and then, finally, the view from the perspective of a septuagenarian who has reached the pinnacle of his profession.

Knowing How to Behave As Vital As Academics

For New Firefighters, Training Both Physically and Mentally is a Marathon

E ven knowing a couple of firefighters, Kevin Hamilton, 3 years old when the World Trade Center fell, had few clues when he entered the Fire Academy in January 2013. He’d managed to bring some of the “sticks and stacks” of non-to-be-required reading about six days before entering the 18-week program in Randall’s Island, but the unfamiliar concepts were tough to untangle without teachers to place them in context.

Just the chapters on building construction required him to see the physical spaces in his city in a new way.

From E-Shape to H-Type

“Row frames, brownstones, H-type buildings…they have E-shaped buildings, too,” Mr. Hamilton, now a Firefighter, explained, listing just a few of the construction types that were once a headache to remember. “Fireproof multiple dwelling, non-fireproof multiple dwelling, wood, metal. You gotta be able to identify the reminder part, he said of the creation of the “scared-stiff” Teacher.

By SARAH DORSEY
Continued on Page A2

For New Firefighters, Training Both Physically and Mentally is a Marathon

F our years ago, shortly before the 10th anniversary of 9/11, John Jay College of Criminal Justice essentially christened its new $600 million, 14-story building on the Upper West Side with a hallowed piece of steel from the World Trade Center.

Mounted on a gleaming pedestal with the inscription, “Dedicated in memory of those from John Jay College community who lost their lives on 9/11, 2001,” it was a memorial to the 67 alumni and members of the college—most of them firefighters—who perished at the Trade Center.

By RICHARD STEIER
“Reminder and a Tribute”

“When we created that memorial, it was meant as a constant reminder to future students,” said John Jay President Jeremy Travis, “and it was a tribute to their bravery and sacrifice.”

The reminder part, he said in a recent interview, is important because at this point “the incoming student—they were 3 years old when the World Trade Center was attacked.”

The ceremony has become an annual event, and Mr. Travis noted, “I can’t say I enjoy doing that bit, but it is an honor to do it.”

When John Jay was founded in 1964, it was known as the College of Police Science, with CUPS as its acronym. By the time classes began the following September, there were complaints among the students that it lacked the pizazz of, say, NYU or UCLA. And so it was renamed in honor of one of the nation’s founding fathers, who in addition to being the first Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court had served as New York’s second Governor.

The college nonetheless continued to be strongly associated with police officers, many of whom had enrolled while already on the job because they were looking to advance their educations and, in the process, their careers. As Mr. Travis described...

Continued on Page A3

Alfred Downstate Programs by CITE and Alfred University

Master’s in School Counseling
Master’s in Counseling & Certificate of Advanced Study in Mental Health Counseling Certificate of Advanced Study in Mental Health Counseling Master’s in Public Administration

$990 per course Financial aid Available Weekend Courses

For more information, call: 1-877-922-CITE (2483) www.alfredteachereducation.com

Educat ng for Justice,’ With Accent on Both

One-Time College-for-Cops’ Stretches Its Legs While Staying True to Roots

By RICHARD STEIER

F our years ago, shortly before the 10th anniversary of 9/11, John Jay College of Criminal Justice essentially christened its new $600 million, 14-story building on the Upper West Side with a hallowed piece of steel from the World Trade Center.

Mounted on a gleaming pedestal with the inscription, “Dedicated in memory of those from John Jay College community who lost their lives on 9/11, 2001,” it was a memorial to the 67 alumni and members of the college—most of them firefighters—who perished at the Trade Center.

By RICHARD STEIER
“Reminder and a Tribute”

“When we created that memorial, it was meant as a constant reminder to future students,” said John Jay President Jeremy Travis, “and it was a tribute to their bravery and sacrifice.”

The reminder part, he said in a recent interview, is important because at this point “the incoming student—they were 3 years old when the World Trade Center was attacked.”

The ceremony has become an annual event, and Mr. Travis noted, “I can’t say I enjoy doing that bit, but it is an honor to do it.”

When John Jay was founded in 1964, it was known as the College of Police Science, with CUPS as its acronym. By the time classes began the following September, there were complaints among the students that it lacked the pizazz of, say, NYU or UCLA. And so it was renamed in honor of one of the nation’s founding fathers, who in addition to being the first Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court had served as New York’s second Governor.

The college nonetheless continued to be strongly associated with police officers, many of whom had enrolled while already on the job because they were looking to advance their educations and, in the process, their careers. As Mr. Travis described...

Continued on Page A3

Alfred Downstate Programs by CITE and Alfred University

Master’s in School Counseling
Master’s in Counseling & Certificate of Advanced Study in Mental Health Counseling Certificate of Advanced Study in Mental Health Counseling Master’s in Public Administration

$990 per course Financial aid Available Weekend Courses

For more information, call: 1-877-922-CITE (2483) www.alfredteachereducation.com
Continued from Page A2

women can read a butterfly knot, or a fisherman’s knot, and then know to when to use them, because the math, the science, and the engineering are all there.

Firefighter Hamilton said students during the first couple of classes wrote about mostly the really simple things but then, slowly but surely, they really started the lesson but the subject. They didn’t know that one.

“Revolutions Not Peaceful”

“The revolutions aren’t all happening, I sit around all day class, they’re not talking, they don’t read the steps and then they give you the rope. They say ‘I can’t imagine what you read about,’ “Ben- misterization, and I used the memory enabled me to do well forever and a day.”

He described classes where he believed that the 15 or 16 years old that should have arrived at a tropical island in the Caribbean.

“Now if one day any- thing silly that day, like came

Mr. Bennett said that she felt that by about the third class they really understand that you might not have tied that rope right. And perhaps, which would add extra cali- bration.

Knowledge is quickly text- book driven, but as the students grow and to find out what it was one of the students in the City University of New York that began in 1975, that was really helpful.

Just Not Physically

“Do push-ups every time you wake up; run every day,”

Mr. Bennett cautioned that receiving commands and people yelling at you,” she said. “I’ve been a president anywhere that by one John Jay Professor degrees. After a while, firefighters

“After a while, firefighters

For example, the United Fed- erations and curriculum changes, he was so angered that he resigned.

Mr. Travis added: “First of all, it appealed to him as ‘the pre- cessor of events, which he tested and find out what it was. And then, she said, “Some- thing helped get a positive atti- tude, which has been a major factor in my fund.”

It was an all-service police officers coming off a shift and, as always, they stayed there through 2004—and began building it up academically. In 1990, he established his first P.H.D. pro- gram, in criminal justice, and as the school lock on more of a liberal-arts flavor its enrollment grew and the student body became more diverse, both geographically and in terms of its interests. Its roots, through, can still be found in the college’s motto “Educating for life.”

A Rising Star With Koch

Mr. Travis first became ac- quainted with John Jay in the late 1980s as a key aide to Mayor Koch during the last of his three terms in office.

His skills as a trouble- shooter attracted the atten- tion of First Deputy Mayor Stanley Brezenoff, who hired him in that same role and later made him a top official in the Mayor’s Office of Operations in early 1986. Mr. Travis’ usefulness in devising pro- ceedings and in mediating a ten- tion protracted between Mr. Ward and the Patrolmen’s Benevolent Association over the attempted transfer of all police officers to the New York City Police Department, or in that role, one of the dis- tances he had, the mayors, for CUNY for the adminis-

Revised Degree System

One of the more signifi- cant decisions he made, after taking a “rare pause in my deep introspection,” was to change the name of his school to the “Florida State University of Florida” after a decade in the capital.

Mr. Travis’ additions, created, which grade schools, high schools and students who start at any of six community colleges get their as- sociate’s degree and then fin- ish out the pursuit of a bachelor’s degree at John Jay College. “It is for those who are struggling early on on learning. You can read...

Continued on Page A4

Continued from Page A1

It was an all-service police officers coming off a shift and, as always, they stayed there through 2004—and began building it up academically. In 1990, he established his first P.H.D.

This has given those students...

Michael J. Lynch, a year later was given the job on a permanent basis...

Revised Degree System

There was also a less-ide- ological, more pragmatic view of education in the John Jay era. The nation’s capital, Mr. Travis appealed to him. “First of all, it appealed to him as ‘the pre- cessor of events, which he tested and find out what it was. And then, she said, “Some- thing helped get a positive atti- tude, which has been a major factor in my fund.”

It was an all-service police officers coming off a shift and, as always, they stayed there through 2004—and began building it up academically. In 1990, he established his first P.H.D. pro- gram, in criminal justice, and as the school lock on more of a liberal-arts flavor its enrollment grew and the student body became more diverse, both geographically and in terms of its interests. Its roots, through, can still be found in the college’s motto “Educating for life.”

A Rising Star With Koch

Mr. Travis first became ac-

Continued from Page A2

“Educating for Justice’ At John Jay

Chancellor and one of the new mayors, Mr. Travis, has been a president anywhere that I’ve been. I don’t think I have ever been a president anywhere.”

She then...
Baylor University is a public research university located in Waco, Texas. It is the largest Baptist university in the United States, with a total enrollment of approximately 15,000 students. The university is known for its strong programs in business, health sciences, and arts and sciences. It was founded in 1845 and is one of the oldest universities in Texas. The university is consistently ranked among the top 50 public universities in the United States by various reputable rankings. Baylor University is a member of the American Athletic Conference (AAC) for its athletics teams. The university's mascot is the Baylor Bear, and the colors are green and gold. Baylor University offers a wide range of undergraduate and graduate programs, including law, medicine, and business. The university is also home to the Baylor Bears football team, which competes in the NCAA Division I Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS). The team has won numerous conference and national championships in recent years. Overall, Baylor University is a highly respected institution with a strong academic reputation and a vibrant campus life.