This seminar is intended to introduce or expand the knowledge of private security professionals to the forensic sciences and their growing role in security investigations. This seminar will include an overview of the different disciplines in forensics and crime scene work, as well as possible options and realistic expectations. A special emphasis will be given to those disciplines most commonly used in private security such as: serology and DNA, latent prints, and document examination. In addition, an overview will be completed as to the most common security uses and needs for forensics in order to conduct more complete investigations and to best suit the needs of the client.

Date: Thursday, April 16th from 6:30-9:30 PM
Location: Room 2200A North Building, 445 West 59th Street 10019
