New Course Proposal Form

Date Submitted ___9/14/12________

1.  a. Department(s) or program(s) proposing this course: ENGLISH

    b. Name and contact information of proposer(s)    Allison Pease

        Email address:   apease@jjay.cuny.edu
        Phone number:   212-237-8565

2.  a. Title of the course: LITERATURE AS WITNESS

    b. Abbreviated title (not more than 20 characters including spaces to appear on student transcripts and in SIMS)   LIT AS WITNESS

    c. Level of this course   ___100 Level   X   200 Level   ___300 Level   ___400 Level

    Please provide a brief rationale for why the course is at the level:

    This course will build on the basic reading and writing skills learned at the 100-level and focus on building an awareness of multiple perspectives on the past as conveyed through creative and scholarly texts. Students will read and analyze primary texts of literature and history from specifically chosen historical eras and cultures. They will have to write 20-25 pages of informal and formal writing over the course of the semester in response to assigned primary and secondary texts.

    d. Course prefix to be used (i.e. ENG, SOC, HIS, etc.): ___LIT________

3. Rationale for the course (will be submitted to CUNY in the Chancellor’s Report). Why should John Jay College offer this course? (Explain briefly, 1-3 paragraphs.)

    This course will introduce students to literature and history from a range of cultures and periods in time. It will provide them with basic skills in critical reading and historical analysis. It will also provide students with broader cultural awareness, both in terms of learning about cultures and the contexts that produced specific works of literature and how literature responds to and shapes historical events. As such it will make a contribution to students general education under the “Learning from the Past” category.
4. Course description as it is to appear in the College Bulletin. (Keep in mind that this is for a student audience and so should be clear and informative; please write in complete sentences; we suggest not more than 75 words.)

This course investigates how literature represents, engages and reflects upon issues and events in their historical moment. Students will explore literary genre, form, and styles while learning how literature narrates and shapes present and past events. Course topics may include wars and religion, family models, social resistance, reformations and renaissances. Critical and writing skills will be enhanced through close analysis of texts and the application of basic literary concepts and methods of interpretation.

5. Course Prerequisites or co-requisites (Please note: All 200-level courses must have ENG 101 and all 300 & 400-level courses must have ENG 102/201 as prerequisites):

   ENG 101

6. Number of:
   a. Class hours   _3_
   b. Lab hours   _0_
   c. Credits   _3_

7. Has this course been taught on an experimental basis?

   _x_ No              ___ Yes. If yes, then please provide:

8. Learning Outcomes (List three to five only). What will the student know or be able to do by the end of the course? How do the outcomes relate to the program’s (major; minor) outcomes?

   • Demonstrate knowledge of formative events, ideas or works in the arts, humanities, mathematics, natural sciences or social sciences
   • Analyze the significance of major developments in U.S. and World History.
   • Differentiate multiple perspectives on the same subject

9. Will this course be part of any major(s), minor(s) or program(s)?

   _____ No       _x_ Yes

   If yes, Indicate major(s), minor(s), or program(s) and indicate the part, category, etc. (Please be specific)

   English Minor
10a. Will this course be part of JJ’s general education program?

No _____ Yes __X__ If yes, please indicate the area:

10b. Please explain why this course should be part of the selected area.

This course takes a historical approach to the study of literature, focusing on how literature arises out of its historical context and is often a direct reaction to real-life events. Understanding how literature speaks to history, not necessarily with a journalistic approach as eye-witness, but rather as a more probing witness to the underlying structures and effects of such events, is an important aspect of literary study. As such, this course is designed to address the learning outcomes of the Learning from the Past category of the college option.

10c. If yes, frequency and number of sections to be offered for General Education:

Every semester __X__ Number of sections: 10-20
Fall semesters only _____ Number of sections: _____
Spring semesters only _____ Number of sections: _____

11. How will you assess student learning?

Through informal writing assignments, formal writing assignments, oral class presentations and final examinations students will not only demonstrate the learning outcomes for their general education category, but also the following outcomes mandated by the English Pathways Guidelines:

- Be able to respond proficiently in writing (i.e. per the outcomes for “A”) to literary works;
- Display familiarity with literary works by a variety of authors in a variety of genres;
- Be able to offer an extended discussion in writing of two or more texts and authors in relation to each other;
- Demonstrate the ability to analyze and interpret based on careful attention both to the detail and overall design of a literary work;
- Demonstrate an understanding of the role of context in determining meaning.

Form approved by UCASC, Sept 16, 2011, modified for new Gen Ed, July 31, 2012
12. Did you meet with a librarian to discuss library resources for the course?

No ____  Yes_X__ If yes, please state the librarian’s name: Marta Bladek

Are there adequate resources in the library to support students’ work in the course?

Yes___x____ No________

Will your students be expected to use any of the following library resources? Check all that apply.

1. Learning from the Past - Please explain how your course meets these learning outcomes

Students will:
| Students will analyze literary works within the context of a historical event or period. Through weekly response papers, oral presentations, three formal papers and a final exam, students will repeatedly demonstrate knowledge of the events of a historical event/period and the literature that arises out of or in response to that history. For example, the final exam asks students to respond in writing to a question about the texts studied over the semester in order to demonstrate knowledge of the Indian Partition and its effects in shaping the literature and films of India and Pakistan. | • Demonstrate knowledge of formative events, ideas or works in the arts, humanities, mathematics, natural sciences or social sciences |
| Students will analyze literature that is developed in response to historical issues and events such as wars and religion, family models, social resistance, reformations and renaissances. Students will be asked to present their analyses in weekly papers, class discussions, oral presentations, formal papers, and a final exam. For example on April 28 of the sample syllabus, students will have to write a one-page response paper in which they summarize Partition as explained in the chapter of a historical text and find a brief passage in the opening pages of The Shadow Lines in which the historical event is reflected. | • Analyze the significance of major developments in U.S. and World History. |
| Students will read primary and secondary historical texts as well as literature in multiple genres from a range of authors. They will write papers and exams in which they identify critical questions about the history and literature and the multiple and contrasting perspectives offered by texts. For example, the first paper will ask student to define the distinct forms of nationalism promoted by Tagore and Ghandi and then to identify how "Toba Tek Singh" and Train to Pakistan both reflect and alter those ideas through the thoughts and actions of their characters. | • Differentiate multiple perspectives on the same subject |

Course Description:

Literature as Witness investigates how literature represents, engages and reflects upon issues and events in their historical moment. Students will explore literary genre, form, and styles while learning how literature narrates and shapes present and past events. Course topics may include wars and religion, family models, social resistance, reformations and renaissances. Critical and writing skills will be enhanced through close analysis of texts and the application of basic literary concepts and methods of interpretation.

This section of Literature as Witness will focus on the Partition of India, and the ensuing development of India and Pakistan as post-colonial nations. In 1947 the national territories of India and Pakistan were carved out of British India, a colonial territory of Britain from 1857-1947. Referred to as “The Partition,” the division of lands in the name of national, economic and religious interests precipitated the largest migration in history and was accompanied by riots in which at least one million people lost their lives. This course explores the Partition not so much as an historical event but as a trauma witnessed again and again in the two nations’ literatures and films.

Learning Outcomes:

- Demonstrate knowledge of formative events, ideas or works in the arts, humanities, mathematics, natural sciences or social sciences
- Analyze the significance of major developments in U.S. and World History.
- Differentiate multiple perspectives on the same subject

Additional Learning Outcomes specific to English Major Pathways Guidelines

Students will:

- Be able to respond proficiently in writing (i.e. per the outcomes for “A”) to literary works;
- Display familiarity with literary works by a variety of authors in a variety of genres;
- Be able to offer an extended discussion in writing of two or more texts and authors in relation to each other;
- Demonstrate the ability to analyze and interpret based on careful attention both to the detail and overall design of a literary work;
- Demonstrate an understanding of the role of context in determining meaning.

Course Requirements:

- Regular attendance and thoughtful, active participation in class discussions. Your grade in the course will drop by 1/3 of a grade (e.g., B- to C+) with four absences. After five absences you will fail the course. While I do not assign a grade for class participation, demonstration of your commitment to the goals of the course can and will affect your grade if you are “in-between” grades when it comes time to tally your final grade. If you have made a positive contribution to class discussion and/or made an effort with the course assignments, you will receive the higher grade. If you have been disruptive or made no visible effort, you will receive the lower grade.

- Weekly one-page, single-spaced response papers due each Monday in which you briefly describe the week’s reading (paragraph 1), identify a passage (from three words up to three sentences) from the text of interest to you, and (a) if the passage is from a literary work, explain a possible interpretation for that passage and what kinds of contexts inform that reading, or (b) if the passage is from a primary or secondary historical document, summarize the main point of the essay and evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of that point (paragraphs 2-3).

Prepared for UCASC, Dec 7, 2012
Three 5-page papers Assignments for each paper will differ, but in general they will ask you to construct arguments about the specific treatment of historical events in fictional texts and the ideas revealed by those treatments.

One ten-minute presentation on a passage from the day’s reading in which you interpret carefully the language of the passage and how it reveals the text’s ideas about characters, historical events, and/or national identity. At the beginning of the semester, students will sign up to make one presentation to the class on any class day during the semester.

One two-hour final examination in which you respond in writing to a question about the texts studied over the semester in order to demonstrate knowledge of the Indian Partition and its effects in shaping the literature and films of India and Pakistan.

Grades:

25% of your grade will be based on the weekly response papers.

45% of your grade will be based on the three graded papers.

10% of your grade will be based on your in-class presentation.

20% of your grade will be based on the final paper and exam.

Statement of College Policy on Plagiarism

Plagiarism is the presentation of someone else’s ideas, words, or artistic, scientific, or technical work as one’s own creation. Using the ideas or work of another is permissible only when the original author is identified. Paraphrasing and summarizing, as well as direct quotations, require citations to the original source.

Plagiarism may be intentional or unintentional. Lack of dishonest intent does not necessarily absolve a student of responsibility for plagiarism.

It is the student’s responsibility to recognize the difference between statements that are common knowledge (which do not require documentation) and restatements of the ideas of others. Paraphrase, summary, and direct quotation are acceptable forms of restatement, as long as the source is cited.

Students who are unsure how and when to provide documentation are advised to consult with their instructors. The Library has free guides designed to help students with problems of documentation.
