Law & Society (BA) Learning Outcomes

The following are the learning outcomes for the Law and Society major:

A. Students will demonstrate knowledge of law, legal phenomena and legal institutions from a variety of perspectives outside the discipline of law, with a focus on the relationship between law and political and social change.

B. Students will initiate, develop, and present independent research addressing and analyzing the relationship between law and society.

C. Students will develop written and oral communication skills to express informed opinions about issues in law and society.