The Latin American and Latina/o Studies Department announces the offering of a course with an internationally-renown scholar from Cuba on a timely and important issue: Caribbean Migration to the U.S., with an emphasis on the history of migration from Cuba, Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, and Haiti. Professor Antonio Aja is a Professor of History and Sociology at the University of Havana, Cuba. He directs the University’s Center for Demographic Studies, Cuba’s leading center for the study of migration. He has twice been awarded the National Social Sciences Prize by the Cuban Academy of Sciences.

The required readings in the course will be in English, and students may write their papers and exams in English, but Professor Aja will impart the classes in Spanish. Students taking this course must be able to understand spoken Spanish.

If you are interested in migration from the Caribbean and wish to have the experience of taking a course with a guest international scholar, this course is an exceptional opportunity.

Fulfills requirements for:
- Major in Latin American & Latina/o Studies (BA)
- Minor in Latin American & Latina/o Studies
- Culture and Deviance Studies (BA)
- Africana Studies minor
- Elective

Enrollment is by permission of the LLS Chairperson, Professor Lisandro Pérez
