

Why be a Language Tutor?

Help Others

Most of our tutors will tell you that this is one of the best jobs on campus because of the satisfaction they derive from helping others learn. They find that there is nothing quite like the thrill of seeing the light bulb go on when a student overcomes challenges with their course material.

Develop Marketable Skills

Being a tutor helps you develop a variety of skills that employers find highly desirable. These include communication, interpersonal, organizational, leadership, time-management, ethics, and the ability to work in groups and help others learn. Good tutors can also receive excellent references and letters of recommendation from the center supervisor when applying for scholarships, internships, graduate programs, and other employment opportunities.

Achieve National Certification

Our tutors receive paid training that prepares them to achieve national tutor certification, which looks great on a resume!

A Convenient Schedule

Your schedule will fit your availability. We have flexible hours throughout the week and work with you to find the best fit.

Frequently Asked Questions about Being a Language Tutor:

What does a Language Tutor Do?

Peer Tutors work directly with John Jay students in small-group tutoring sessions that last an hour. In addition, they may conduct workshops with larger groups or work with students in special programs on a one-on-one basis. Not only do they help students master course content, but they also assist students in developing the skills and strategies they need to become active, independent learners. Tutors work a consistent schedule between 5 and 20 hours per week in-person & online (when applicable) during the center's hours of operation. New tutors may be limited to no more than 8-10 hours per week in their first semester.

Although previous tutoring experience is desirable, most of our tutors have never tutored before. They are selected on the basis of academic achievement, language proficiency, interpersonal and communication skills, and personal qualities such as responsibility, integrity, and concern for others.
