JUDY ALEXANDER is a graduate student in the Neuroscience Psychology Laboratory at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Judy is also a member of the Macaulay Honors College at CUNY and the John Jay Honors Program. Judy has conducted research on how the brain operates and how drugs affect the brain.

KRYSTYN HARTWEBER is a doctoral candidate in the NCSU Center for Human Science at North Carolina State University. She studies the relationship between virtual reality and human perception and cognition.

Sharon M. is a graduate student at the University of Maryland, College Park. She focuses on the role of technology in shaping the future of society and how it can be used to address social issues:

DANA H savings is a senior at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. She is the author of "The Power of Empathy: A Study of Empathetic Relationships," which explores the relationship between empathy and social interaction.

LILIAN BERNSTEIN is an assistant professor at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. She is the author of "The Science of Empathy: A Study of Empathetic Relationships," which examines the role of empathy in social interaction and emotional regulation.

VANESSA AYALA is a junior at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. She is the author of "The Science of Empathy: A Study of Empathetic Relationships," which examines the role of empathy in social interaction and emotional regulation.

PHILLIP H. is a psychology professor at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. He is the author of "The Science of Empathy: A Study of Empathetic Relationships," which examines the role of empathy in social interaction and emotional regulation.