The Work: An Open Conversation About Racial Justice and the Need for Sustained Action

Friday, June 19th at 1:30pm

With demands for racial justice everywhere, from protesters in the streets to our students and faculty, now is the time for our justice-minded community to take the next steps toward meaningful action.

Come and hear from John Jay alumni who work closely on justice reform issues that are at the forefront of our minds. Together, we will explore the work ahead, the many ways students can contribute, and discuss how our curriculum, programs and services can better support equity and prepare those who are committed to justice advocacy.

Join the John Jay community for an open conversation on the next steps toward racial justice.
